Headline:
Very warm or hot.

Today:
A fine dry day with long sunny spells and becoming very warm or hot. It could be the hottest September day in Scotland for over 100 years, with September temperatures last reaching more than 28 Celsius away back in 1906. Maximum temperature 28 deg C (82 deg F).

Tonight:
A fine end to the day and staying dry with clear spells. However, some low cloud, mist and fog could form overnight, particularly near the coast. Minimum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Thursday:
Low cloud and mist at times near the coast. Otherwise bright spells and scattered showers, the showers possibly heavy with a risk of the odd rumble of thunder. Maximum temperature 21 deg C (70 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Friday rather cloudy with showers, these heavy at times with chance of thunder. Cloudy with outbreaks of rain on Saturday, but drier and brighter on Sunday.
